Georgetown University's Fathali Moghaddam, who specializes in intergroup relations and conflict, describes the making of a terrorist as a staircase where each successive floor is characterized by specific ways of thinking. On the ground floor, individuals are disgruntled because they feel deprived and have particular perceptions of fairness.

Society and Culture: The Making of a Terrorist | Vision

Since 9/11, the state of Pakistan has come to be regarded as the epicentre of terrorist activity committed in the name of Islam. The central argument of this volume suggests that terrorism in Pakistan has, in essence, been manufactured to suit the interests of mundane political and class interests and effectively debunks the myth of 'Islamic terrorism'.
